

Duncan – Why Bookless

Reference for the call

WHAT HE'S ALREADY DOING

His knowledge is the asset

He's already tutoring students one-on-one in his former course. He knows what the exam tests, where people get stuck, and what the official notes don't explain. Right now that knowledge disappears after each session.

WHAT BOOKLESS IS

In one sentence

Properly written course notes, broken into steps, delivered through Slack — so each topic connects to the next and students actually understand the material, not just memorize it.

WHAT THE ROLE ACTUALLY IS

Subject knowledge. Nothing else.

- Shape the lesson content — what goes in, in what order
- Flag what the exam actually focuses on
- Review drafts to make sure nothing is wrong or missing

No coding. No design. Just the course knowledge he already has.

WHAT HE GETS

Early position, not a favour

- Income share as students join — not a flat tutoring rate
- His knowledge builds into something permanent instead of resetting every semester
- First person in on a course that is being built right now

THE ASK

One course. See if it works.

Start with one course. Build one set of lessons together. If it makes sense, go further. If it doesn't, nothing is lost. That's the whole conversation.
