

What Is Bookless

Old notes. New understanding.

THE PROBLEM

University material that was never written to be understood

Zambian university students are studying from course material that is years — sometimes decades — old. It was written for a different era. Nothing connects to anything else. Students spend more time figuring out what matters than actually learning it.

The problem is not that lecturers are careless. The problem is that the material is just old — and no one has rebuilt it.

WHAT BOOKLESS IS

Independently researched course notes. Built from scratch.

Bookless researches each course topic from current, reliable sources — not a reformat of lecture slides. The notes are written to be understood, structured so each topic connects to the next, and delivered step by step through Slack.

By the time a student finishes a course, it makes sense as a whole thing — not just a pile of topics they memorized to survive the exam.

HOW IT WORKS

One course. Step by step. Everything in one place.

- Each course is broken into lessons. Each lesson is a set of clearly written steps.
- Steps are delivered as PDFs through dedicated Slack channels — one channel per lesson.
- Students work through the material together. The channel keeps the conversation focused on that topic.
- Everything is mobile-first. Students access it on their phones, whenever they need it.

FOR TUTORS

Your knowledge. Built into something that lasts.

If you already tutor students in a course, you know what the exam actually tests and where students get stuck. That knowledge is exactly what Bookless is built on.

- You help shape the lessons — what goes in, what order, what matters for the exam.
- You review the material for accuracy before it goes to students.
- Your work turns into a product that runs every semester — not a session that resets.
- You earn as students join, not a flat rate that doesn't grow.

WHERE IT IS NOW

Live. Running. Being built.

- Website: bookless.framer.ai
- Active courses: Strategic Management and Treasury Management — ZCAS
- Course material is built and posted. Students are in.

This is not an idea waiting to launch. It is running, and the next phase is bringing the right people in to build it further.
