UNDERGRADUATE DEGREE DISSERTATION MARKING FORM

Student ID..... Name..... Overall Mark.....

Criteria	Mark Allocation	80%+	70-79%	60-69%	50-59%	40-49%	30-39%	<29%
		Outstanding	Excellent	Very Good	Good	Satisfactory	Un-acceptable	Clear Fail
Introduction, Research topic and objectives/hypotheses and/or research questions: Has the candidate clearly stated and justified the research topic and the objectives/hypotheses & research questions that the research is intended to address?	10%
Literature review: Is there evidence that peer-reviewed journal articles have been read and used? Has the candidate identified gaps in the literature? Has the literature been evaluated rather than just described? Does the literature review cover classics, landmarks and recent developments in the field of study? Have conclusions from the literature been summarised and indicated how they feed into the research design? Is the review appropriately signposted and sufficiently well-read?	20%
Methodology: Has the candidate fully described the research methods, the form of the data collected and how this articulates with the research question and theoretical framework chosen? This chapter should outline details of the research strategy, sample and sampling method, primary and/or secondary data collection, procedure, limitations of the research design, data analysis approach, and research integrity etc.	20%
Results/Analysis/Discussions: Have the results been presented in a clear and comprehensible manner e.g. by using charts and graphs? Is there adequate review and evaluation of the data used in relation to the research aim/objectives/hypothesis and research questions? Is there benchmarking with the findings raised and discussed in the literature review. This benchmarking stimulates the analysis and provides the platform for the conclusions/recommendations.	25%
Conclusions & Recommendations: Has the candidate clearly stated how and to what extent the research has addressed the research aim originally posed and made clear its significance with regard to the theoretical framework used? Are there reasonable recommendations which relate to and develop from the conclusions reached? Have implications for both future research in the area studied and for the industry under investigation been clearly identified?	10%
References: Have all references used in the narrative been listed in full and used within the narrative using the Harvard system? A full list of references should be presented at the end that truly reflects those that were cited in the text throughout the dissertation. The Harvard System should be used throughout.	10%
Mechanical Soundness: Is the dissertation clearly written, spell-checked and grammatically sound? Clearly signposted headings should be included to guide the reader through the study and should be labelled numerically. Commentary links to conclude each chapter and lead to the next should be included. Also, introductions to each chapter at the start to introduce the scope and direction and to contribute to clarity and understanding. Mechanical soundness therefore refers to all of the communication and labelling issues relevant to the communication and clarity of ideas.	5%
